

Seeing is believing? Not!

Reading email newsletters this morning I see that "news from all quarters indicates a positive mood amongst steel makers in Europe" whilst, at the same time, "there is talk of redundancies at Tata in Corby and at Ruuki in Finland". Obviously NOT positive indications from all quarters. However, this situation seems to me to be typical of the information we are fed. I would imagine that the talk of redundancy has some substance, so what is positive about that.

Who are the experts?, can they be trusted? (was it not experts that got us into this mess in the first place?). There was a time when we could make serious decisions based on what we were reading but these days we can only look at our own business and make decisions on what we can see on our own doorstep. The bigger picture is proving too big for everyone. who is paying wages to these 'experts' - and why?

<http://f.metal-supply.com/2yvi7m0wyjr75jaa.html>

23/10/13 Laser Process - David Lindsey <dl@laserprocess.co.uk>